If you think you live to work, you may be addicted to work. It is dangerous to be a workaholic. Although you may finish a lot of work and have the feeling of achievements, you may endanger your marriage, ruin your relationships with your children and friends, get burnt out, and end up in an early grave. If you want time to live a more enjoyable, meaningful life, the following tips can serve as good guidance.

- Change your values so that work is no longer the most important thing in your life.

- Limit the number of work assignments you accept. Stop being a “People Pleaser” and break the "Nice Guy" stereotype.
- Limit the amount of time you spend working.
- Develop a daily or weekly routine of non-work activities, so you learn to enjoy things other than work.
