III.閱讀測驗 (36~40 題，共 5 題)

Meeting and greeting people aren't as easy as one might think it is. There are many ways to say hello to people from different cultures. Shaking hands is usually the standard way of greeting someone in the West. In America, people usually shake hands when they are first introduced, but family members and friends may kiss or hug to demonstrate their affection. Sometimes, people shake hands when they want to say goodbye or conclude a business deal.

In Korea, men bow and shake hands to greet each other. Women do not usually shake hands. Japanese people also bow to greet people. In Chile, people usually shake hands but women also peck each other on the cheek. They usually just kiss the air. Men sometimes give each other warm hugs called "abrazos." In Finland, people prefer warm but firm handshakes. Whatever the culture is, saying hello is always a polite thing to do.
