Last year my husband wanted to do something special for my 30th birthday so he took me to a wonderful hotel for the weekend. He didn't tell me where it was or what it was like before we set off because he wanted to surprise me. I was expecting a typical hotel somewhere in the countryside, but after driving for about six hours we came to the coast. We drove past a couple of small towns and then came to a very quiet road. My husband suddenly stopped the car beside an old lighthouse. A lighthouse is a very tall building like a tower. It has a powerful light at the top to warn ships of danger. This lighthouse, however, was no longer in use and it was now a lovely hotel.

There were only four rooms for guests and we had the room right at the top. There was a breakfast room on the floor below. Because the lighthouse was round, the walls of all the rooms were curved and there was a fantastic view of the sea from all the windows. We had a very relaxing weekend and went for long walks along the coast. The beaches were beautiful and we found some amazing caves to explore. On Sunday morning we went for a horse ride along the beach below the lighthouse. I was disappointed when it was time to go home.
