Learning a new language can be both exciting and challenging. It helps people connect with others, understand different cultures, and even improve their job opportunities. Many students start by learning basic vocabulary and grammar, but real progress often comes through practice. Watching movies, reading books, or speaking with native speakers can speed up learning. Making mistakes is part of the process, and learners shouldn't feel embarrassed. In fact, those who aren't afraid to make errors usually improve faster. Some people also keep journals in the new language or use language learning apps daily. With time, patience, and consistent effort, anyone can become fluent and feel confident communicating in a new language.

36. What is one benefit of learning a new language?

- (A) More free time
- (B) Better job chances
- (C) Less school work
- (D) Learning to paint

37. What helps learners make real progress?
